Music City Star customers should prepare for delays, cancellation Ongoing rain and inclement weather heightens possibility of flooding on tracks

NASHVILLE – Due to the steady rainfall in the area and increased potential for flooding, the Regional Transportation Authority is advising Music City Star customers to begin considering alternatives to tomorrow morning's rail service.

RTA supervision will be inspecting track conditions in the early hours of Monday, February 11 for factors which could impede the safe operation of the train's morning commuter service. Customers are encouraged to make alternative arrangements in the event officials deem any segment of track impassable due to flooding.

Updates will be provided Monday morning on WeGo and RTA Facebook and Twitter, as well as on local news outlets.
